RE: Invitation to submit an Article, Letter, or Perspective to ACS Materials Au for our 2022 Rising Stars Virtual Special Issue.

Dear Sudip,

You may be aware that ACS has launched a suite of nine gold open access journals publishing in specific areas of chemistry and interfacing areas. These titles meet the publishing needs of researchers who choose or are required by their funders to publish in fully open access journals. Shelley Minter will lead the suite of titles as the inaugural Editor-in-Chief, and we will serve as Deputy Editor and Associate Editors for ACS Materials Au. You can find more information in Shelley's editorial: "Funding Mandates and the Launch of Nine Fully Open Access ACS Au Journals" (<https://pubs.acs.org/doi/10.1021/acsmaterialsau.1c00003>).

ACS Materials Au is a fully open access journal that aims to publish high-quality research at the forefront of fundamental and applied materials research and at the interface between materials and other disciplines, such as chemistry, engineering and biology. Our scope encompasses that of the ACS hybrid journals Chemistry of Materials, ACS Applied Materials and Interfaces, and ACS Materials Letters, and our mission includes ensuring the quality of work published in ACS Materials Au meets the standards set by these sister journals. We have published three issues, which you can access from the journal homepage (<https://pubs.acs.org/journal/amacgu>), but are already looking to the future. In particular, we are planning a virtual special issue in 2022 comprising the work of Rising Stars in Materials Research. This collection will be populated by contributions from outstanding early-career researchers; the contributions will be published throughout the year, then gathered into a virtual collection. Both the research and the Rising Star will be highlighted, and the collection will be widely publicized by ACS Publications.

We had an open call for nominations, and yours were among the 300+ nominations we received. Based on your record of accomplishment and future promise, we would like to invite you to join the inaugural cohort of ACS Materials Au Rising Stars. You may choose to submit a Perspective (preferred), Letter, or Article. Please see the author guidelines (https://publish.acs.org/publish/author_guidelines?coden=amacgu) for more information about these publication types. To facilitate your participation, I am happy to offer you a full waiver of the Article Publication Charges (via an APC voucher) so that you can publish gold open access at no out-of-pocket cost to you.

If you plan to accept this invitation, please do let us know within the next two weeks so we can set aside an APC voucher for you. If you can also tell us the manuscript type and estimated submission date, that would be helpful for planning purposes. For an accompanying editorial in the virtual collection, and for general advertising, we will also request a suitable photograph of you. This may be included with the manuscript submission, or emailed directly to me.

In the meantime, should you have any questions about the process or the journal, please don't hesitate to reach out.

CITATION BROCHURE

Infosys Prize 2021 | Physical Sciences

*These writeups will be used in our brochure, citation certificate, and website

BEDANGADAS MOHANTY

Short citation (57/60 words)

The Infosys Prize in Physical Sciences is awarded to Bedangadas Mohanty for investigations of the nuclear force. At the Brookhaven National Laboratory and the European Organization for Nuclear Research he determined the transition temperature of the quark-gluon plasma to hadronic matter, observed heavy antimatter nuclei, observed nuclear spin-orbital angular momentum interactions, and other effects in quark-gluon plasma.

Expanded citation (134/140 words)

Bedangadas Mohanty expanded our understanding of the strong nuclear force. He is a leader in the STAR experiment at the Brookhaven National Laboratory and the ALICE experiment at the European Organization for Nuclear Research. When a quark-gluon plasma (QGP) is formed in high energy nuclear collisions, it “coagulates” into ordinary hadronic matter via a phase transition. From these experiments Mohanty measured the temperature at which this happens and elucidated various other properties of the QGP.

Additionally, Prof. Mohanty was the first to observe heavier-than-hydrogen nuclei made of antimatter, to first to observe the formation of a QGP fluid with the largest known vorticity, and to study the physics of particle-production mechanisms, fragmentation processes and parton energy loss in the QGP medium. Finally, we note his contributions to searches for fractionally charged particles and Disoriented Chiral Condensates.

Bio (135/140 words)

Prof. Bedangadas Mohanty is an experimental high energy physicist at the National Institute of Science Education and Research in Bhubaneswar and at the Homi Bhabha National Institute in Mumbai. He earned his B.Sc. and his M.Sc. in Physics from Utkal University, Bhubaneswar, placing first in both cases, and his Ph.D. from the Institute of Physics, Bhubaneswar.

Prof. Mohanty is a Fellow of the Indian National Science Academy, New Delhi, of the Indian Academy of Sciences, Bangalore, of the National Academy of Sciences, India, and of the American Physical Society in the USA.

He has held Fellowships and post-doctoral positions at the Variable Energy Cyclotron Centre (Kolkata) and at the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory (USA). He has won the Shanti Swarup Bhatnagar Award (2015), the Swarna Jayanti Fellowship (2010-11), and the INSA Young Scientist Medal (2003).

Scope and Impact of work (232/240)

Prof. Bedangadas Mohanty's contributions have pushed the frontiers of our knowledge of the strong nuclear force.

Known as an energetic leader, he has driven the programs in the STAR experiment at Brookhaven National Lab (USA) and at the ALICE experiment at the European Organization for Nuclear Research (CERN, Switzerland) where he directed efforts towards elucidating important physics results. The quark-gluon plasma (QGP) formed at high nuclear densities and high temperatures cools down to ordinary hadronic matter via a phase transition. By studying, for instance, swings in the net baryon number at the critical point, Prof. Mohanty measured the temperature (around a trillion Kelvin) at which this happens. The implications of this measurement are far-reaching and go beyond nuclear physics, particularly in astrophysics and cosmology.

Prof. Mohanty's work that demonstrated various aspects of the QGP is likely to be emulated by experimenters who follow. His observations of nuclei made of antimatter that are heavier than hydrogen, specifically anti-helium and anti-hypertriton, provide conclusive evidence for these exotic particles after earlier results from experiments in satellites in orbit. Similarly, the uniquely powerful suggestion from Prof. Mohanty to exploit the very high magnetic fields in high-impact parameter nuclear collisions has undoubtedly paved the way for a new class of experiments. Finally, he has established new techniques in his studies of particle-production mechanisms, and in his contributions to searches for fractionally charged particles and Disoriented Chiral Condensates.

Congratulatory message from Jury Chair (66/60 words)

The Infosys Prize recognizes your novel contributions to knowledge of the nuclear force. Your leadership and intellectual steering of the STAR (BNL) and ALICE (CERN) collaborations led to measurement of the transition temperature from quark-gluon plasma to hadronic matter. You observed the heaviest antimatter nucleus, searched for and observed spin-orbital angular momentum interactions and found re-scattering and collective effects in quark-gluon plasma. Congratulations, Prof. Bedangadas Mohanty.

Lifetime Achievement Award for Dr C. S Pramesh

Published on: March 11, 2022

Dr C. S Pramesh received Lifetime Achievement Award at the Indian Society for Clinical Research \(ISCR\) annual conference in appreciation of his role as a change agent in the field of healthcare, research and patient care.

Dr Pramesh (Director, Tata Memorial Hospital, Mumbai) leads the National Cancer Grid \(NCG\), a collaborative of 264 cancer centres in India and a few from abroad.

As the NCG Convener, he leads the grid towards providing uniform standards of cancer care across the country, reducing inequities and making cancer treatment accessible to all geographic regions and strata of society. The NCG has a proven record of being a major factor in humanising cancer care in India by creating universally accepted guidelines for treatment, guiding need-based research, and facilitating educational programmes.

The NCG is a network of major cancer centres, research institutes, patient groups and charitable institutions across India with the mandate of establishing uniform standards of patient care for prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of cancer. It promotes uniform evidence based guidelines for management of patients, and collaborative clinical research, which ensures same quality of care to patients in all centres from any part of the country.

Dr Pramesh is also a visiting professor at the Division of Cancer Studies, King's College London and the Institute of Cancer Policy, King's Health Partners, London. He has written more than 200 peer-reviewed journal articles, including topics such as collaborative research and cancer policy. The ISCR is an association of Indian clinical research professionals and provides a forum for exchange of information and learning.

Congratulations, Dr C. S Pramesh!

11th Annual Symposium on Global Cancer Research

Rachel Pearline Award Nomination Form

The Rachel Pearline Award honors Rachel Pearline, MD, MPH. Dr. Pearline was a revered oncology fellow who received the award named in her memory in 2016 following her death at the age of 38, in November 2015, from gastric cancer. While in medical school, she completed rotations in South Africa, Haiti, Romania, and rural China where she learned to speak Mandarin fluently. For her work, she received a prestigious Fogarty International Clinical Research Fellowship and Tulane University's award for "Outstanding International Relationships." Dr. Pearline was virtuously committed to global cancer control and provided quality care to her patients. She viewed the practice of medicine as a privilege, always striving to serve her patients better.

In honor of Dr. Rachel Pearline, the 11th Annual Symposium on Global Cancer Research Steering Committee would like to invite nominations for the 2023 Annual Rachel Pearline Award. As part of the Symposium each year, we recognize one outstanding professional who embodies virtue and eminence in cancer research, practice, and/or training in a low- and middle-income country (LMIC) setting. The theme of the 2023 Symposium is "Closing the Research-to-Implementation Gap" and the Steering Committee invites nominations of individuals, at any stage in their career, who have made major contributions to global cancer research, practice, and training. The nominee should be affiliated with an institution from a LMIC and their work should focus on cancer research, practice, and/or training in an LMIC setting.

The nominee will be recognized at the virtual Annual Symposium on Global Cancer Research on April 6, 2023. The nominee will be expected to take part in the award presentation ceremony as well as to give a keynote address that highlights their contributions to cancer research, practice, and/or training in an LMIC setting, and their future perspectives.

The Steering Committee will review nominations based on the following criteria:

1. Demonstration of commitment to and excellence in cancer research, practice, and/or training
2. Focus on reducing inequities through cancer research, practice, and/or training
3. Affiliation with an institution based in an LMIC
4. Cancer control research, practice, and training activities either entirely or predominantly implemented in LMICs
5. Career stage and potential to contribute to cancer control in LMICs in the future

Additional eligibility criteria:

1. Nominations submitted in previous years are accepted

2. Self-nominations are accepted

3. Nominee must confirm willingness/ability to accept the award and deliver a keynote address, virtually, at the Symposium in advance of nomination submission (confirmation to be stated within the nomination form).

Timeline

The nomination period is September 26, 2022 through November 27, 2022.

The nominee will be selected and notified in January 2023.

The VASVIK award for the year 2020 in the field of Material & Metallurgical Science & Technology is given to:

Dr. Kinshuk Dasgupta

Head, G & AMD, Materials Group, Bhabha Atomic Research Centre, Mumbai

Dr. Kinshuk Dasgupta has developed the lightest and the most economical AK-47-HSC (hard steel core) bullet resistant level III + bullet proof jacket – Bhabha Kavach, using in house developed Carbon nanotubes and boron carbide composites. This indigenously developed jacket is an import substitute and has been inducted in Central Armed Police Forces at a one-third of the import cost, resulting in saving of precious foreign exchange. Dr. Dasgupta has made significant contribution towards large-scale synthesis of Carbon Nanotubes (CNTs). The single walled CNT, Multi walled CNT and CNT Aerogels have been successfully deployed in various strategic and societal applications.

Dear Professor Mahajan,

The Council of the Indian Academy of Sciences in its meeting held in December 2021 has recommended your election to the Fellowship of the Academy. Please accept my warmest congratulations!

Since its inception in 1934, nearly 2000 of the leading scientists of India (as well as some from outside India) have been elected Fellows of the Indian Academy of Sciences. Through its various activities, our Academy plays a major role in furthering the cause of science in the country, and Fellows of the Academy not only act as spokespersons for their disciplines, but also for the science at the national level.

The activities of the Academy come under three major categories: scholarly publication, science education, and science dissemination. The Academy publishes 13 scientific journals on different subjects, including Current Science (in association with Current Science Association) and organizes several discussion meetings on important topics of scientific interest. In addition, we have a vibrant visitors' programme whereby distinguished colleagues from across the world can be invited to occupy the Raman, Janaki Ammal, Jubilee and Academy-Springer Nature Chair Professorships. Detailed information on these activities is available on our website (www.ias.ac.in).

The Academy has an extensive and active science education programme in which the Fellowship and the scientific community of the country play an important role. There are refresher courses of up to three weeks, summer research mentorship as well as short discussion meetings that are held all across the country. The Academy also selects a few outstanding younger scientists as Associates each year. Both these programmes have been undergoing considerable restructuring in order to help us achieve our objectives in a more equitable manner. A matter that has received particular attention over the past year has been summarised in the document "Scientific Values: Ethics Guidelines and Procedures", the revised guidelines for ethical conduct that we expect all Fellows to uphold.

The Academy meets twice a year, the mid-year meeting being in late June/early July, and an annual meeting held in the first week of November. I hope that it will be possible for you to attend one of the meetings of the Academy during this year, and also regularly in subsequent years. Your participation in the activities of the Academy and your help in promoting its programmes will be crucial.

I look forward to your active involvement and will be happy to hear from you as to how we can strengthen these activities. With best wishes for a very happy New Year 2022, and with my personal regards,

Sincerely,
